

Chang Gung University

Graduate Program in Molecular Medicine

(English Program for Master's Degree)

International Students

Introduction

Chang Gung University (CGU) was first established as Chang Gung Medical College (CGMC) at Tao-Yuan (Northern Taiwan), in 1987 by the founder of Formosa Plastic Group Mr. Wang Yung-Ching. In 1997, the CGMC was formally changed to CGU. With intensive collaboration between Chang Gung Memorial Hospital, CGU is a first-rated international renowned university and is ranked within top 400 University world-wide.

The English Program for Master's Degree (MS) in Molecular Medicine, under the School of Medicine, is designed for international students with a background in biology, biomedicine, or biotechnology who wish to engage in vigorous training leading to a MS degree. All lectures and laboratory courses are offered in English. Students can also enroll in technology/laboratory-based summer courses, and have access to the cutting-edge core facilities in the Molecular Medicine Research Center at CGU. Faculty members have expertise in the following areas: Molecular Medicine, Biochemistry, Molecular and Cellular Biology, Microbiology (Bacteriology, Virology, Parasitology), Immunology, Pharmacology, Physiology, and systems biology disciplines such as Genomics, Proteomics, Metabonomics and Bioinformatics.
